Becoming AICP - Advice from Recently Credentialed Members Discussion

Monday, August 22, 4:30-5:30 pm | AIA Offices

Why do it? What do you need to know? Come prepared to ask questions and engage with professional colleagues. This is an interactive opportunity to pick the brain of individuals who recently became AICP and hear from people who just took the exam on what the experience is really like. What would they have done differently and what worked. study tips and candid advice from recent AICP members.

You'll learn about:

- What recent AICPs would have done differently to prepare for the exam
- What preparation methods worked
- What the exam experience is really like

Member Highlight: John Debauche

John has worked for the City of Kansas City, Missouri's Planning and Development Department since 1999 and currently serves as a Lead Planner in the Long Range Planning and Preservation Division. Since 2014, he has focused on the area north of the Missouri River, prior to that he had been the City's 4th District Planner, which is generally between the Missouri River to south of the Country Club Plaza from State Line Road to Troost Avenue. In his capacity with the City, he has had the opportunity to work on a variety of projects ranging from neighborhood plans, streetscape plans to area plans, including the Greater Downtown Area Plan, the Midtown / Plaza Area Plan and the Main Street Streetscape Plan. He is currently working on a community initiative relating to the City's future plans for the Twin Creeks Development Area and is coordinating the City's efforts with several community partners including the Northland Chamber of Commerce, on the Northland Big 5 Project. He received his Master Degree in Urban and Regional Planning from the University of Wisconsin – Madison. In his spare time he enjoys spending time with his family, playing drums and listening to music.

August 24, 2016 | 8:30am - 11:30am

Kauffman Foundation | 4801 Rockhill Rd, KCMO

Please join us on Aug. 24, 2016, from 8:30–noon at the Kauffman Foundation Conference Center for the second regional stakeholder workshop focused on climate resilience. This workshop will feature Steve Adams, director of Urban Resilience at the Institute for Sustainable Communities. Steve will share his experience about the elements, impacts and collaborations involved in regional resiliency efforts across the United States. His presentation will inform stakeholder input into the development of a high-level climate resilience strategy for metro Kansas City.

Following his presentation, workshop participants will work together in small and large groups to identify priority goals and strategies to be included in the regional resilience strategy. Conversations will build on a previous workshop held on Nov. 14, 2015, at which participants helped identify key issues, vulnerabilities and community efforts already underway. The workshop was informed by this potential climate scenario for metro Kansas City.

Instructor:

As the director of Urban Resilience at the Institute for Sustainable Communities (ISC), Steve works to identify, catalyze and scale breakthrough opportunities to advance urban sustainability and resilience within the United States. Steve leads key components of ISC's U.S. climate change adaptation and resilience programming to build the capacity of local leaders in addressing the impacts of global climate change and providing both strategic and technical assistance. Since leaving government in 2009, Steve has led community-based and sector-based adaptation projects in Oregon, helped catalyze the Southeast Florida Regional Climate Change Compact as a model for metro-regional scale climate governance and co-founded the American Society of Adaptation Professionals. Steve is currently working on projects in the greater Phoenix and Seattle/Puget Sound regions, and has worked on resilience issues in New England, the Great Lakes region, the Intermountain West and the West Coast states.
